The invocation was offered by Dr. Ernest Easley, pastor, First Baptist Church, Odessa, as follows:

Our Heavenly Father, we acknowledge today that you have ordained government for our welfare and protection. You have instructed us in Holy Scripture to pray for those who are in positions of leadership. For these elected officials who gather in this place today representing the citizens of Texas, I lift them up to you thanking you for their life and love for the great State of Texas. As they face the great issues of our day, issues that will affect the families across our state, may they seek you first for wisdom and direction. May prayer be their priority and not their last resort.

Forgive us for thinking we can deal with the problems of our day without divine counsel. Forgive us when we have sinned against your word, your ways, and your will. We thank you for not giving us what we deserve, but what we need: your grace upon our life.

I ask that the decisions made by this body will bring honor to you and please you in order for the State of Texas to experience your hand of blessing; for your word tells us in Proverbs 34:14, "Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

May our leaders seek righteousness as they lead us as a state. I ask that you will protect them and their families these days as they serve the people of Texas. Thank you lord for the privilege of prayer. May it always be our practice.

In Jesus' name I pray. Amen.
